THE STUTE

STEVENS INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY

Castle Point
Hoboken, New Jersey

Friday, September 14, 2001
Volume XCIX, No. 4

A Day That Will Never Be Forgotten

By Lillian Chu

Not often does the entirety of the Stevens campus gather on Castle Point at 9 am on a bright weekday morning. However, on the morning of a very tragic September 11, members of the Stevens community semi-consciously gathered on the Point and watched over the Hudson as a Boeing 767, American Airlines Flight 11 out of Boston, hit the northern Twin Tower, one of seven buildings in the World Trade Center.

Within twenty minutes, the south tower, 2 World Trade Center, was hit with another hijacked plane, United Airlines Flight 175, also out of Boston. People watched in horror as the buildings burned, many frantically calling friends and relatives who worked in the World Trade Center area.

Black smoke filled helped out where necessary. Some EMT trained students took their duty on the ambulances while others volunteered themselves at the Path station helping the injured to the treatment facilities and hosing victims for fear of contamination.

Presuming many campus members had family and or friends working in the World Trade area, Dr. Tim Welles and a priest were located in the Pierce Dining Hall to offer counseling to anyone worried or grieving.

In the meantime, the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) stopped flights throughout the entire nation for the first time in United States history. Yet more hijacked airliners were attacking in other parts of the United States.

The Pentagon, the Headquarters of the United States Department of Defense, was hit with the world were on alert. Airports continu

The community of Hoboken watches in disb Twin Tower collapses.

Kent Killings Arouse Students; Two Weeks of Sit-ins, Demands

by Mark Schubin '71

The following is a news story. Nevertheless, due to the emotional and close involvement of this reporter to the events which took place, all of what follows cannot be taken strictly at face value.

I will try to be as objective as possible, but, as Larry Minck '53 of the Alumni Association recently remarked, "Objectivity, like infinity, can never be achieved." I therefore suggest that the reader assemble as much information as possible in an effort to arrive at the truth.

It all began . . .

A good starting point for the events at Stevens relating to a student strike is a meeting held in the Stevens library last Monday night. The meeting was announced through flyers handed out Monday afternoon near the Sixth St. gate. At the meeting a request was formulated asking for the cancellation of classes on May 7 to allow a day of reflection for the Kent State University students who were slain and to express opposition to U.S. Southeast Asian policy.

The resolution was presented to the Student Council, where, after

STEVENS STUDENTS FOR PEACE

U.S. OUT OF CAMBODIA

The Stute
September 12, 2024

Class of 2028

STEVENS

A look into the First Year Experience course

BY TANYA AVADIA ON SEPTEMBER 6, 2024

With the start of the new semester and the welcome of the newest ducks to the fle university is excited to announce the launch of the First Y

Fall 2024, it is a required course

WELCOME BACK, STEVENS!

CAMPUS LIFE RESUMES AMIDST CORONAVIRUS PANDEMIC

PAGE 8 FRIDAY, OCTOBER 31, 2008

AROUND THE WORLD AND BACK

Weekly Stock Exchange: | Dow Jones

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION 2008

REPUBLICAN PARTY DEMOCRATIC PARTY