Adults increasingly believe that AI is not well regulated.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

Adults increasingly believe that AI is not well regulated.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.

The share of employed adults with at least a bachelor’s degree who say AI is not well-regulated is up by 25 points since 2021.

In 2024, employed adults with college degrees were more evenly split on whether the benefits outweighed the risks versus the risks outweighing the benefits than in 2023.